Panthers Plundered

Two young krewes squared off in Charlotte's harbor, and our krewe stole the Queen City's loot! It started as a running battle, but soon enough, the air was opened to some big gainers...

A nice punt return set our shipmates up with a short distance to score on the second possession. Despite a setback that took ten stripes, the krewe took the attack to their opposition...

The twitter blue kittens answered with their only score of the day, which led to some changes to shore up our defenses...

The answer to that score came on the next foray against our biggest rival. A slant went all the way to find the booty!

From that point, it was just a matter of time before the krewe could leave the pillaged village for the comforts of home! All that was left for the safety was to keep from tripping on the hemp rope hung out to dry on the gunwales...

Man Overboard!

Defense

The defense had a good outing, keeping the pussycats down to one score. That came on a fourth down, with four yards to go. The pressure that was put on was broken when the slot corner slipped on a quick slant pass...

Overall though, the defense held as the cat scratch fever never heated up after that score. There was a long, sustained attack late in the battle. But, after a good, hard shot left the ship's bell ringing for the blue quarterback, their new man was the pickle in the barrel!

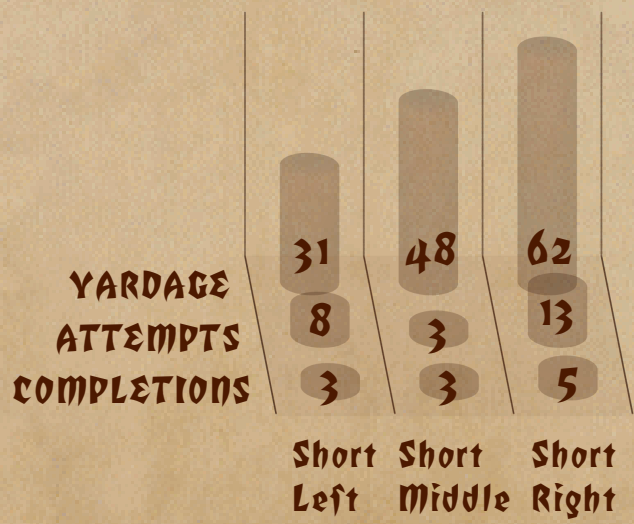

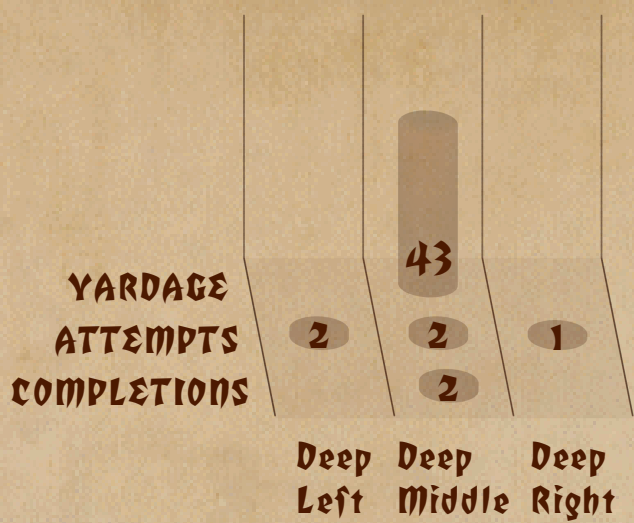

Our thieves came away with two picked passes and a fumble...

Defending the Pass

Thar be no safety in these numbers!
A sellout tactic left an otherwise strong effort hanging out to dry.
On fourth and four, an old nemesis had an easy score on a short slant to the middle. That be the only time the krewe gave way...

A fumble and recovery came when the pressures increased. Sacking came about smartly, too!

Defending the Run

A new tactic, devised for this particular foe, was scuttled early in the battle. After gashing runs to the middle area, our mates were positioned well to stop the damage by midway through the second quarter...

Offense

First to score! Last to score! Most to score! No score by them went unanswered by us...

The numbers aren't impressive, but the score was good ol' NFC South.

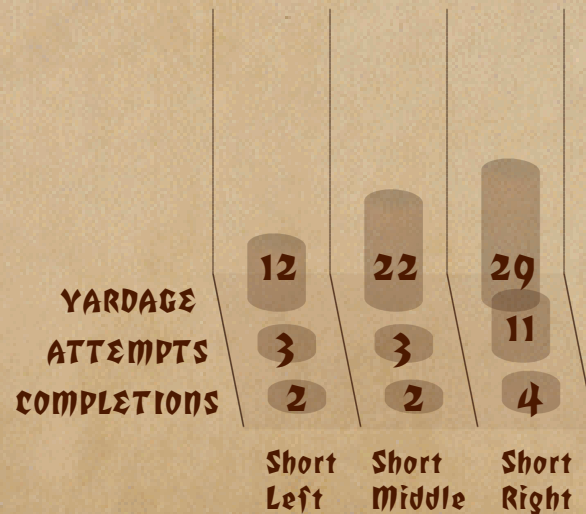

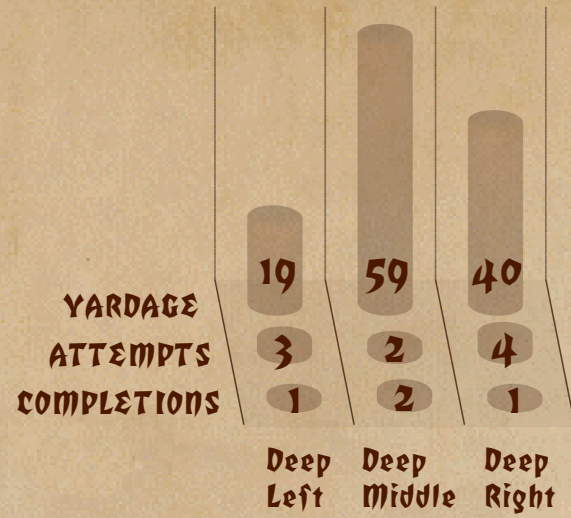

The big difference, from the last skirmish between the two rivals, was that the throwaways didn't end up in the hands of the kitties. The running attack didn't add much to the battle. But, several passes hit their mark for big yardage, and scores! Whilst there was only two touchdowns, there were two field goals to boost the lead...

Pass Offense

WTB?

Our best gunner, a giant human being, had stolen from him five times on the last time the battle was at the Banks of Amerigo...

This time... Ahrr, THIS time, the big man gave nothing away! Number thirty-four hauled in his first ever catch for a score on a short right toss. Then, a new mate matched the scalawag's slant with one of his own! That score was setup when our foes couldn't claw the big gunner down on the play before. He made them pay with a forty yard gain!

Run Offense

WTB?

There was some success in the middle- to-right side, but a good amount of those yards came when the quarterback ran. These paltry numbers need to improve, else the rations of grog will soon be halved!

Kicks and Coverage

Ahrr! Th' cover krewe let a forty-three yard return go by...

WTB?

Punts and Coverage

A long punt with a short return netted forty-eight yards on the first salvo...

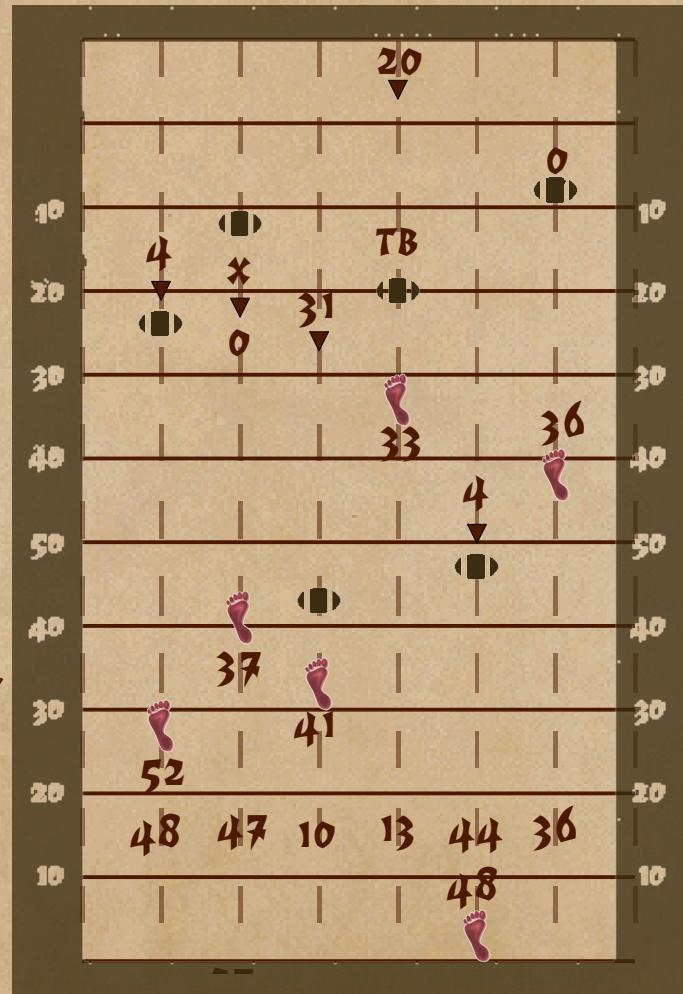

A penalty aided the second punt...

The third punt was returned for thirty-one yards...

Then, a fake field goal was punted into the end zone...

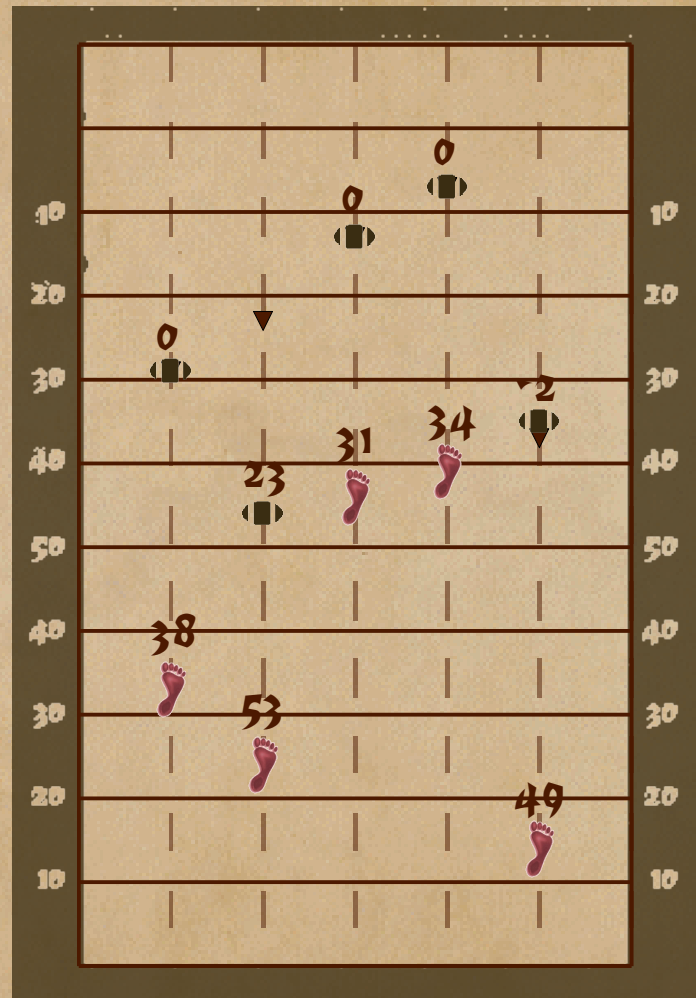

A nice forty-eight yard punt from the three yard line gave the defense some breathing room...

The last punt was downed inside the ten yard line...

WTB?

Kick Returns

There was no remarkable kick return. One punt return went for twenty-three yards. Some punts were fairly caught...
